Thoughts from the East

WB Michael Aladich Worshipful Master

The Power of "We" in Masonic Leadership

Freemasonry is built upon the principles of brotherhood, unity, and collective progress. In our lodges and in life, true leadership is not about personal ambition but about the strength of the Craft as a whole. A Masonic leader who embraces "we" instead of "I" understands that success is measured not by individual accolades, but by the harmony, growth, and enlightenment of the brethren.

When a Worshipful Master or any Masonic officer leads with the mindset of "we," he fosters a sense of shared purpose and brotherly love. Freemasonry thrives on collaboration—each Brother, from the newest Entered Apprentice to the most seasoned Past Master, plays a vital role in the success of the lodge. A leader who acknowledges this, strengthens the bonds of fraternity, ensuring that all voices are heard and valued. Conversely, when leadership becomes about "I," it risks undermining the very foundation of Masonic principles. The lodge is not a stage for personal recognition but a sacred space where men come together to improve themselves and serve the greater good. A leader who seeks only his own prestige may find himself isolated, while one who uplifts his brethren will find unwavering support.

Throughout Masonic history, the greatest Masters have been those who exemplified humility and service. They understood that their role was to guide, not to dictate—to unite, not to divide. The words "we build," "we serve," and "we grow" reflect the true essence of Masonic leadership.

Ultimately, the strength of a lodge does not rest on the shoulders of one man but on the collective efforts of the brethren working in harmony. By embracing the power of "we," Masonic leaders ensure that the principles of our fraternity endure, inspiring future generations to walk the path of light together.

So mote it be.
